

Wonderful Wetlands Upgrade On Track

Saltwater Coast and Point Cook residents will soon be able to explore more of the estates unique and beautiful wetlands with works progressing on the $5.5 million major wetland development at Saltwater Coast.

With works commencing in July last year, residents will soon be able to enjoy the 4.5 hectares of planned public space including boardwalks, walking tracks, BBQ areas, fitness equipment, adventure playground and a public amphitheatre.

Senior Development Manager of Saltwater Coast Colin Greaves said the wetlands development would act as a central hub for residents and visitors and completes Saltwater Coast's Central Park.

"The new works are all about showcasing the natural beauty of the wetlands, increasing accessibility, and promoting greater awareness about the importance of the wetlands," Colin said.

The wetland development is the final part of Saltwater Coast's Central Park development, which includes existing walkways and parklands and is complimented by the Saltwater Coast lifestyle centre directly across the road, which includes gym, swimming pool, café and function centre.

To give residents a sneak peek of the new Wetlands area, Saltwater Coast has released these artist impressions of how the area will look once completed.

We're really excited to welcome this new addition to the neighbourhood and hope you are as well.
