SALTWATER COAST CROCODILE PARK

Saltwater Coast Crocodile Park, Saltwater Promenade, Point Cook
Verdict: 9/10

Highlights: water play, wading pool, opposite cafe
 Splish, splash! A sensational water play area including a long, winding stream emanating from a big crocodile's jaws is the highlight of this brand new playground. Unfortunately the crocodile water play has been switched off until mid-February while excess sand is cleared out of the big croc's mouth. Kids can get soaked in a small wading pool, make their way along the stream on stepping stones and run through water jets at the end. There's also a big wooden adventure playground including a rope bridge, rope ladder, bouncy mat, musical ropes and a bell to ring. Also a great sandpit, smaller climbing structure for littles, two long slides, two birds nest swings and seesaw. Lovely undulating site next to lakes with waterbirds and boardwalks. Lots of lush picnic-perfect grass patches in the playground, and barbecues and picnic tables under shelter. Across the road from Coast Cafe. The downside is a lack of shade. Nearest toilets across a walking bridge.
